

Comma Coaches Go Live

Comma Partners, leading communication and change interim provider, will now offer executive coaches to support the delivery of change.

Comma Partners is already known for placing high quality interims who advise and implement change communications and change management for industries as diverse as mining, pharma, financial services, media, gambling and food distribution. These interims often identify the need for leadership coaching on their projects, and while they can offer occasional informal coaching to leaders this is inevitably time-limited due to other responsibilities.

Comma will offer a choice of coaches to business leaders who are driving change and those who are impacted. Each associate coach is a member of a leading coaching body and has extensive executive coaching experience working on a one to one basis, and with teams too. Drawing on their background of working in-house as business leaders and strategic communication specialists, all offer expertise in change management, leadership and engagement.

Virginia Hicks, owner of Comma Partners said: “This is a step I have wanted to take for a number of years. We know that coaching is a critical strategic benefit to businesses, enabling leaders to develop their understanding and skills to embed change more effectively. Managing themselves and their colleagues through change can be tough and lonely especially in times of conflict or when difficult decisions have to be made. Working with an executive coach provides leaders with support and perspective as well as the self-development opportunity to maximise impact. Offering executive coaching support is a natural step for Comma and we are look forward to filling this gap with our associate coaches”.
